The newly reimagined series, Cultural Inquiries in English Literature, 1400-1700, is a continuation of the award-winning Medieval & Renaissance Literary Studies series, formerly published by Duquesne University Press.

Recognizing the complex relationships linking disciplines in the pre-modern period and to account for the lived experience represented in literary and cultural texts in this time, scholars have broadened the scope of their examinations to reconnect fields often now considered distinct, including cuisine, ecology, cartography, the occult, meteorology, physiology, drama, popular print, and poetry. Cultural Inquiries in English Literature, 1400-1700, seeks monographs and edited volumes that consider literary and cultural texts as partners in and products of their complex contexts.

Series Editor
Rebecca Totaro is Professor of English at Florida Gulf Coast University. She is the recipient of the Monroe Kirk Spears Award from SEL, Studies in English Literature 1500-1900, for “Securing Sleep in Hamlet,” and she is the author and editor of five books, including most recently Meteorology and Physiology in Early Modern Culture: Earthquakes, Human Identity, and Textual Representation.

Submissions should include a 3–5 page proposal outlining the intent of the project, its scope, its relation to other work on the topic, and the anticipated audience(s). Please also include 1–2 sample chapters, if available, and a current C.V.

Questions or submissions? Contact:
Kendra Boileau, Editor-in-Chief
Penn State University Press
klb60@psu.edu | 814-867-2220