Career Development Services: Individual Student Advising Feedback

Methodology

Students were provided the opportunity to assess the outcomes of their individual advising sessions during the months of October 2012 and February 2013, as those were determined to be active months for career advising appointments. Assessment forms were given to students following their advising sessions. Student participation was not required, but was encouraged and all feedback remained anonymous.

A total of 128 assessment forms were collected. A count of counseling appointment notes indicates 208 sessions were held during October and February (combined) for an approximate 62% response rate.

Summary

Overall, students indicated important improvements in their self-reported capability to handle the career issue they came in to discuss. Areas of concern identified by students included resume or CV writing, cover letters, personal statements, internships, academic major choice, career goals, job search, interviewing and online presence. Further, students found their Career Advisors helpful, they reported new insights or skills gained and they were clear about the next steps they would need to take.

Career Development Services: Etiquette Dinner 2013 Feedback

Career Development Services frequently partners with the FGCU Alumni Association to host event for students and graduates to connect with each other and enhance their career development. One such event is the annual Etiquette Dinner, which brings together students and alumni, as well as numerous local employers who sponsor and host tables. The event features a formal four-course dinner with professional servers and a presentation from the nationally-recognized etiquette and protocol expert, Nonnie Cameron Owens. Ms. Owens has been teaching etiquette at colleges since 1987 and is a certified consultant for U.S. and Asian culture etiquette.
