Florida Gulf Coast University’s Division of Public Affairs, the SW FL Center for Social and Public Policy, and our community partners offer a special opportunity to hear from national, state, and local experts on the relationship between human well-being and community design.

Keynote: Dr. Richard J. Jackson, University of California, Los Angeles
Dr. Jackson has done extensive work in the impact of the environment on health, particularly relating to children and chaired the American Academy of Pediatrics Committee on Environmental Health. Over the past decade much of his work has focused on how the ‘built environment’ including how architecture and urban planning affect health. He recently served on the Board of Directors of the American Institute of Architects and has written and spoken extensively in the above areas. Currently, Dr. Jackson has been working on policy analyses of environmental impacts on health ranging from toxicology, chemical body burdens, terrorism, sustainability, climate change, urban design and architecture. In addition, he is developing policy analyses in related areas, such as how farm, education, housing, and transportation policies affect health. Dr. Jackson co-authored Urban Sprawl and Public Health, a 2004 book from Island Press.
